

Emily Lively

Speech Pathologist, Director of Lively Eaters Feeding Services

Emily works with families Australia wide to successfully change children and family's eating cultures and habits and reduce the stress and negativity that mealtimes have often become. Emily has worked within paediatric inpatient, outpatient and community speech pathology since 2000. Over the last 14 years she has specialised in infant and paediatric feeding difficulties, working at both hospital and clinic settings in country South Australia, the United Kingdom and metropolitan Adelaide. Prior to establishing Lively Eaters, Emily worked in her own paediatric private practice and provided assessment and therapy for general speech and language delays and disorders, Autism and Asperger assessments, children with complex medical and development disorders and feeding difficulties.

Until the end of 2012, Emily held the position of Senior Paediatric Speech Pathologist at Flinders Medical Centre responsible for feeding services in the Neonate unit, paediatric ward, paediatric outpatient clinic, Child Assessment Team and cleft palate clinic. Emily is currently completing her PhD through Flinders University looking at the factors which impact on the time taken to wean children from enteral tube feeding to oral eating. Emily's passion for assisting children with feeding difficulties led to the development of a private clinic specialising solely in this area
